PROCESS:

A panel of artists and arts professionals will review applications and select projects for funding. Applicants may be contacted after proposal reviews for a brief personal interview.

Selection criteria:

All proposals will be evaluated based on the following criteria:

- Creative and conceptual strength of the proposed project
- Overall vision of the applicant(s)
- The capacity of the applicant(s) to realize the project
- The project's potential for meaningful impact in/on the community, regional art ecology, and other artists, which may include:
 - Relevance of the resulting project to the public
 - Engagement of others in the community in and with the project
 - The project's commitment to addressing a regional constituency
 - The project's demonstration of support from others in the community, including other artists
 - The use of venues that will encourage a different kind of audience

Funding Priorities:

Rocket Grants will fund projects that exist outside of established institutions, occur outside of traditional forms of support, challenge traditional methods of production or presentation, add energy and diversity to the field of arts activity in our area, and provide opportunities for the creative growth of those involved. Elevating the presence of unconventional or under-recognized art forms is a strong priority for this grant program.

What kinds of projects are eligible for funding?:

Applications will be accepted from artists, curators, collectives, collaboratives, partnerships, and artist-run spaces residing within an 80 mile radius of the Kansas City metropolitan area, including Lawrence, Kansas.

Although all projects funded must include a primary component that is visual in nature, supported projects may also include performance, film, video, new media, social practice and interdisciplinary projects. Performing artists are eligible to apply if their work includes a strong visual component or involves meaningful collaboration with a visual artist or artists.

Projects must have a public life – i.e., they must engage and be made accessible to the public via process, presentation, production, or publication. Manifestations may include

- exhibitions with a strong public component
- site-specific installations
- public art projects
- public programs
- events
- performances
- screenings
- online projects
- publications
- residencies
- programming of artist-run spaces, etc.

Support for curatorial and publication projects will be for original projects involving significant collaboration with artist(s) from the geographic region and substantially contributing to this region's contemporary art and cultural discourse.

Projects that will reach or connect artists and/or communities from different parts of the region (i.e. Kansas City and Lawrence) are encouraged.

What kinds of projects will NOT be funded?:

- Projects proposed by a 501c3 non-profit organization
- Projects in which the lead artist/organizer or the majority of artists live outside the 80 mile radius zone, or are not resident in this area at the time of application
- Projects that do not have a public component, that are not accessible and presented to the public or that do not exemplify innovative practices
- Projects that request the use of venues run by partner institutions (Charlotte Street/Urban Culture Project and the Spencer Museum of Art)
- Projects or artists that receive funding for the first round of Rocket Grants will not be eligible for the second round
- Projects in which the lead artist/organizer or any of the key participants is under the age of 21 or enrolled in any undergraduate program at the time of application
